Steve Bestly Attacked

Steve Bestly, Singer of the popular British group “Shunk”, was attacked on stage last night. The attack happened during a dramatic concert at the Central Theatre in London. Bestly was singing his hit song, “Stone Love”, and smashing his guitar on the floor, when an excited young man jumped on the stage. The man wearing a brightred T-shirt and blue jeans hit Bestly several times. After a few minutes security guards arrived and took the desperate attacker away.

Bestly’s extrovert manager, Dave Quick, said later, “These incidents must stop; you are not safe anywhere these days. That guy almost killed Steve and those guards were no good.” Bestly was taken to the near –by Selfield General Hospital, where our reporter spoke to him. Bestly said, “that maniac almost killed me and those gorillas took hours to stop him. I must have more protection when i am singing, it’s dangerous to sing in public nowadays”. When our reportersaid that “Shunk’s” act was too violent, Bestly replied,

“That is ridiculous Skunk is a great group which plays good music that’s all. The violence is in the audience, not on stage.”

Beastly returned home from the hospital after two hours and is already talking of performing again tomorrow. The police have not identified the attacker and do not know why Beastly was attacked. However some of his admirers are saying that a girl was the cause of this incident. We hope to have more information about that tomorrow.
